Basic Life Support (BLS) Training Course Offered at Southern State

Registration is now open for the Basic Life Support (BLS) Initial Training course that will be offered at Southern State Community College in December. This course is designed to equip healthcare professionals and other interested participants with the knowledge and skills needed to respond effectively to cardiac emergencies.

Developed by the American Heart Association (AHA), the course will focus on delivering high-quality CPR both individually and as part of a coordinated response team and teaches participants how to save the lives of victims experiencing cardiac arrest through high-quality cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR).

Participants will learn essential rescue techniques for adults, children, and infants, preparing them to respond confidently in a variety of healthcare settings.

Course Details:

- Prerequisites: None
- Location: Central Campus, 100 Hobart Drive, Hillsboro
- Course Fee: $65 per participant -- This fee includes the provider manual and all necessary course supplies, and must be paid before attending the class.

Individuals interested in gaining or renewing their BLS certification are encouraged to register early, as the class size is limited.

For registration information and additional details, please contact Amanda Lewis at 800.628.7722, Ext. 3520 or email alewis@sscc.edu.

To register online, please visit https://www.sscc.edu/academics/short-term-training/basic-life-support.shtml.

The American Heart Association strongly promotes knowledge and proficiency in all AHA courses and has developed instructional materials for this purpose. Use of these materials in an educational course does not represent course sponsorship by the AHA. Any fees charged for such a course, except for the portion needed for AHA course materials, do not represent income to the AHA.
